President's Message by Jeff Schwartz

A message from the Club's President-Elect

Dear Club Members,

Thank you for electing me President. I appreciate your support and am proud to lead Culver City's oldest, largest, and most trusted political organization. Thanks especially to the past leadership who sustained and grew the Club. I plan to draw on your experience throughout my term.

This is a complicated time for our Club and party. Last year Alexandria Ocasio Cortez said that, in most other countries, she and Joe Biden would not be in the same party. However, she, we, and President Biden understand that the unique system and history of the US has forced us together. Nothing happens in American politics outside of the two party system, and only one party is seriously interested in using government to help people.

For example, many of our Club members are seeking solutions to the housing crisis. This newsletter contains an essay by Mark Lipman, a member of this Club and of the city's Committee on Homelessness, which is very critical of upzoning (rezoning neighborhoods to allow denser housing construction), while other members are involved in the new Culver City for More Homes group (https://cc4mh. org), which sees upzoning as a key part of a strategy to address the housing crisis. Culver City Mayor Alex Fisch, a member of this Club, is a strong supporter of upzoning, including the controversial statewide SB50, while Vice Mayor and State Senate candidate Daniel Lee, also a member of this Club, is concerned that broad measures risk gentrifying historic African-American and working class areas such as Leimert Park.

Through my job at the Santa Monica Public Library I am hosting an online talk by urban planner Shane Phillips on his book The Affordable City: Strategies for Putting Housing within Reach (and Keeping it There) Feb. 17 at 7PM (click here to register). A Santa Monica library card is not required. Phillips' book presents fifty-four progressive housing policies, including several upzoning options. The event is free; I hope you will join us.

As Democrats, we are engaged in a serious debate about how to solve the housing crisis. Republicans are not. We saw this in the fight for local renter protections, when their lobbyists in the California Apartment Association, the Apartment Association of Greater Los Angeles, and the Chamber of Commerce had nothing to offer except threats veiled as predictions about the dire consequences of tampering with the so-called "free market." If you can't afford the place you live, they say to move somewhere cheaper. If you can't afford to live anywhere, they might offer you support through a private charity, but no one to the right of Joe Biden has a housing plan besides "let the market sort it out."

That means that, despite our many differences, we are here together. I hope we will all stay. I plan to continue to organize interesting monthly programs, to maintain good relationships with our elected officials on all levels, to increase our publicity and fundraising activities, to make our endorsement even more coveted, to encourage members to become more active, to connect more with other organizations and party leadership, and to keep expanding our membership and budget.

Again, my thanks to the nominating committee, voting members, and past and present leadership for this opportunity. I look forward to the year ahead!

February 10 General Meeting Program

Our speaker for Black History Month is Akili, of Black Lives Matter. A couple of the topics that may come up are:

- The January 6 attack by Trump supporters on the U.S. Capitol had several consequences. One was the impeachment of a President a second time, which never happened before. We also saw clearly the difference between the way the police treat non-white protesters and the way they treated the mostly white mob at the Capitol.
- In Los Angeles, George Gascón, the newly-elected District Attorney, announced an aggressive approach to criminal justice reform.

Culver City Democratic Club endorses Vice Mayor Daniel Lee for State Senate

The members of the Culver City Democratic Club voted to endorse Culver City Vice Mayor Daniel Lee in the March 2 special election for the District 30 State Senate seat vacated by Holly Mitchell's election as LA County Supervisor.

On January 26, the Democratic Club held an online forum with the three Democrats running: Vice Mayor Lee, Assemblymember Sydney Kamlanger, and Cheryl Turner, an attorney, member of the State Board of Vocational Nursing, and President of the Apartment Association of Greater Los Angeles. The forum was moderated by Maximina Juson, editor and publisher of the Culver City Catalyst.

Following the forum, all Club members were emailed a link to ElectionBuddy.com, a secure and secret online ballot.

The Democratic Club thanks the candidates for participating and Ms. Juson for moderating. A video of the forum will be available soon on the Club's website and on the Catalyst website.

A partial transcript and video link to a recent talk by Daniel Lee about policing in Culver City can be found here.

Three CCDC members tell why they voted to endorse Daniel Lee

Michelle Weiner

Before I share my reasons for my unbridled support of Daniel Lee, I want to acknowledge the awkward situation our Club members found themselves in when we voted to endorse one of two well-known and respected Club members in the race for state senate after our forum on January 26th. This has happened in other races recently, in the endorsement of CADEM delegates, and in the endorsement in the recent Supervisor race. It is never easy when we face these kinds of choices.

I chose to vote for Daniel because he is a fierce advocate for the environment and for a just transition to renewable clean energy. He was an environmental activist before he was an elected official. As a council member he worked to shut down the Culver City portion of the Inglewood Oil Field. He will push to shut down the entire Inglewood Oilfield and will work to end neighborhood drilling in SD 30. He will not accept donations from the oil industry.

We have witnessed Lee on the dais speaking out forcefully for significant change to ensure that public safety works for all members of our community. He has the courage and integrity to win allies and bring about restructuring of policing and incarceration statewide that is long overdue.

In my work with Culver City Community Coalition and Protect Culver City Renters, I have seen Daniel take time to listen to constituents and act boldly in support of policies that advance the interests of the most vulnerable. He fought to establish renter protections and rent control in Culver City for the first time and he will fight to strengthen protections for all renters in our district and all across our State. He is not accepting donations from real estate developers.

Culver City Democratic Club has given its coveted endorsement to Culver City Vice Mayor Daniel Lee again, this time as a candidate for the CA Senate District 30 seat. I am delighted and look forward to voting in the special election on March 2, for Daniel Lee. —Michelle Weiner

In 2018 my wife and I received a flier, hand-delivered, to our small apartment at the end of a long driveway off of Prospect Avenue. The only time any politician has personally canvassed our hidden home in the eight years since I moved in. He said he was sorry he missed us. Later, while reviewing DSA's list of local recommendations we saw Daniel Lee for Culver City City Council. "Hey that's the same guy! He might be legit!" We checked out his platform and he was fighting for everything we believed in!

When the time came, we were proud to drop off our ballots in person. It's astonishing the difference you feel between pride and obligation, when casting a vote for someone who is principally aligned with your values. Not just someone who makes you shrug and say "Well at least they don't want to privatize the Post Office," but someone who understands the fundamental difference between universal healthcare and a public option. Someone who doesn't take money from police, oil and gas or insurance companies. Someone who is critical of performative gestures without substantive action.

I know some people in the Club are conflicted because they feel a personal commitment to candidates they may consider friends. This is completely understandable. But in my view, the left is losing ground to institutional power and Daniel is the only candidate that is radical enough to persevere without it. If we want to win we have to be strong. We have to believe that a better world is possible and we have to fight for it. I believe that's what Daniel is doing and I will help him fight. That's why I voted for him.

—Danny Young

Carlene Brown

I voted for Daniel Lee because he speaks like Reverend William Barber, of the Poor People's Campaign. Reverend Barber reminds us every Moral Monday that the USA is in a "critical moment of moral reckoning" that calls for a complete rejection of the way we have done politics up until now.

Vice Mayor Daniel Lee showed us how to demand that moral reckoning in his City Council speech on January 25th. He challenged us to think of public safety in terms of not only our affluent neighbors but our Black neighbors of all income levels, of our immigrant neighbors from all over the world, of our Mexican-American or Central/South American neighbors.

Like Reverend Barber, Daniel Lee challenged us to admit that racism and White Supremacy are systemic issues, not only in police departments across the country, but within ALL institutions in the USA. Daniel Lee named the existence of White Supremacy within our city council and within our city staff. We can trust

The Hill we Climb by Amanda Gorman

Read by the author at the Inauguration of President Joe Biden

When day comes we ask ourselves, where can we find light in this never-ending shade?

The loss we carry, a sea we must wade

We've braved the belly of the beast

We've learned that quiet isn't always peace

And the norms and notions of what just is Isn't always just-ice

And yet the dawn is ours

before we knew it Somehow we do it

Somehow we've weathered and witnessed a nation that isn't broken but simply unfinished

We the successors of a country and a time

Where a skinny Black girl descended from slaves and raised by a single mother can dream of becoming president only to find herself reciting for one And yes we are far from polished far from pristine but that doesn't mean we are striving to form a union that is perfect We are striving to forge a union with purpose

To compose a country committed to all cultures, colors, characters and conditions of man

And so we lift our gazes not to what stands between us but what stands before us

We close the divide because we know, to put our future first, we must first put our differences aside

We lay down our arms so we can reach out our arms to one another

We seek harm to none and harmony for all Let the globe, if nothing else, say this is true:

That even as we grieved, we grew That even as we hurt, we hoped That even as we tired, we tried

That we'll forever be tied together, victorious Not because we will never again know defeat but because we will never again sow division

Scripture tells us to envision that everyone shall sit under their own vine and fig tree

And no one shall make them afraid If we're to live up to our own time Then victory won't lie in the blade But in all the bridges we've made That is the promised glade

The hill we climb If only we dare

It's because being American is more than a pride we inherit, it's the past we step into and how we repair it

We've seen a force that would shatter our nation

rather than share it

Would destroy our country if it meant delaying democracy

And this effort very nearly succeeded

But while democracy can be periodically delayed

it can never be permanently defeated

In this truth

in this faith we trust

For while we have our eyes on the future

history has its eyes on us

This is the era of just redemption

We feared at its inception

We did not feel prepared to be the heirs of such a terrifying hour

but within it we found the power to author a new chapter

To offer hope and laughter to ourselves

So while once we asked, how could we possibly prevail over catastrophe?

Now we assert

How could catastrophe possibly prevail over us?

We will not march back to what was but move to what shall be

A country that is bruised but whole, benevolent but bold,

fierce and free

We will not be turned around or interrupted by intimidation because we know our inaction and inertia will be the inheritance of the next generation

Our blunders become their burdens

But one thing is certain:

If we merge mercy with might,

and might with right,

then love becomes our legacy and change our children's birthright

So let us leave behind a country better than the one we were left with Every breath from my bronze-pounded chest, we will raise this wounded world into a wondrous one

We will rise from the gold-limbed hills of the west,

we will rise from the windswept northeast where our forefathers first realized revolution

We will rise from the lake-rimmed cities of the midwestern we will rise from the sunbaked south We will rebuild, reconcile and recover and every known nook of our nation and every corner called our country, our people diverse and beautiful will emerge,

battered and beautiful

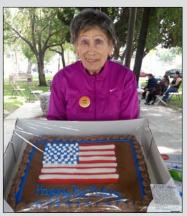

When day comes we step out of the shade,

aflame and unafraid

The new dawn blooms as we free it

For there is always light,

if only we're brave enough to see it If only we're brave enough to be it

Mollie "Lee" Welinsky

Di's Corner:

by Diane Rosenberg

We are saddened by the passing of Mollie "Lee" Welinsky, long time Club member and former Club president, who passed away on Wednesday, January 13, 2021. Sending condolences to her family: her son Howard Welinsky, and her daughter Sandy Mansur; their spouses, grandchildren, and great-grandchildren. Lee had many "hats," not only in the Club. In the LACDP she was not only a Delegate for the 47th A.D. (now 54th), she was on the "Resolutions Committee" and a member of the County Central Committee. When she turned sixty she became an attorney, and retired twenty years later. For all of us who knew her she will surely be missed.

Update on Club member Charlotte Gunter: She is doing well. Still has care givers. Doing exercises for her elbow. Her attitude is excellent.

At our January 13 General Meeting we had the election of new officers for 2021. They were elected by acclamation. For President, Jeff Schwartz; First Vice President, Freddy Puza; Second Vice President, Jeanna Harris; Corresponding Secretary, Cynthia Hart; Recording Secretary, Shannon Theus; Treasurer, Eric Fine; Membership Secretary, Diane Rosenberg.

The meeting adjourned in memory of Capitol Police officer Brian Sicknick, who was killed on January 6 while protecting the elected leaders of the United States. He was murdered by an angry mob incited by Donald Trump.

New Club Officers Elected in January

The following Club officers were elected by acclamation to a one-year term at the General Meeting on January 13. They will be sworn in at the February General Meeting by Council member Yasmine-Imani McMorrin.

President	Jeff Schwartz
First Vice President	Freddy Puza
Second Vice President	Jeanna Harris
Corresponding Secretary	Cynthia Hart
Recording Secretary	Shannon Theus
Treasurer	Eric Fine
Membership Secretary	Diane Rosenberg

Trump-proof the presidency

The way this country could Trump-proof the presidency is to have decent options that are champions for the people, like Bernie Sanders would have been. Bernie would have handily beaten Trump, not barely squeaked a win by like Biden did. Also, the Democratic Party needs to keep an engaged and active party of members, not apathetic. Why did they become apathetic? Because the two parties are not working for the people but for the corporate class. We can Trump-proof the presidency by getting money out of politics and eliminating the corporate stronghold in our government.

OPINION A much-needed conversation on housing

by Mark Lipman

By far the most consequential decision facing Culver City today is the question of zoning. How we as a community answer this will forever decide the future of our city. Once the genie is out of the bottle there is no putting it back. Once we've handed over our right to control our own destiny to the for-profit developers and major tech corporations there is no getting it back.

It's no secret that there's been a well-financed, coordinated push to up-zone Culver City for years, and it's been presented to us as some inevitable fait accompli. It's as if the decision has already been made for us and the existing community really doesn't have a say in the outcome. Worse yet, it's being packaged to us as some sort of heroic "progressive" solution to address our current housing emergency and fight racism, when nothing could be further from the truth.

Nothing that these up-zoning advocates have offered does anything to solve the homelessness crisis we see in our community today, for by their own words they are not pushing up-zoning to house people who are homeless, but to create more market rate units for hypothetical, future residents 20 years down the line. Likewise, nothing they propose will address the long-standing history of racism and inequity in our community, because what they blatantly fail to acknowledge is that racism and poverty are inextricably linked. Without addressing the need for real affordable housing in a serious way, there's no addressing racism, or the economic discrimination that goes with it.

What we're seeing in fact is nothing more than professional level gaslighting, financed by the very same high tech corporations, like Apple, Amazon, Google, and Facebook, (which is the money behind groups like CA YIMBY and Abundant Housing). They're the very corporations that have been vying for complete ownership of the entire Westside region for the last decade—the very same corporations that are at the heart of creating (and profiting off of) the housing and homelessness emergencies we face today. They point at the problem they created and then tell us to trust them with finding the solution.

Don't be fooled. We're told that up-zoning is the only way to get affordable housing units built, but that's simply not true. There are many options available to us to create those lower income units we need, without handing our city over to Wall Street and speculative investors, but those solutions have been consistently ignored out of hand.

There are solutions like land banking and public housing that are no more expensive—actually cheaper for us—than the $500K plus subsidy per door that the for-profit developers demand, and that our politicians and staff members don't even question and instead are readily willing to just hand over. It's "what's always been done," which is also a major part of the problem.

We're currently relying on the very same corporate entities that created the problem to define the solution, and their solution always boils down to the same thing—profits.

Why in the world should we trust the corporate plan? We owe it to ourselves to have a full and transparent public debate on all the options on the table, before we rush headlong into destroying the one thing that everyone agrees they love about Culver City—that small town feel.

When they say that the land is too expensive, we need to point out that it's the up-zoning and corporate takeover of the region which has driven the artificial inflation of land prices; that by saying no to up-zoning we are in fact making the land more affordable and easier for us to buy.

When they say there's no money, we must remind them that there are literally billions of dollars available from the state, allocated for the production of affordable housing, and that if the state—through RHNA—is mandating upon us to make a plan to produce thousands of units (two-thirds of which are supposed to be for lower income levels), then they must also make the funding available to us to produce those units. Otherwise they are acting in bad faith, knowing full well there is no way to reach those affordable goals without state funding.

Moreover, we have to repeat to ourselves over and over again that we can join the public bank that the City of Los Angeles is creating, in order to finance our own public housing projects. These are the very projects which should be built along the transit corridor and Expo Line. Lower-income people need public transportation the most. They need to live near those lines, instead of the higher income people being targeted, who primarily rely on their cars to get around.

When they say we need to up-zone our residential R1 districts (to built multi-million dollar duplexes) or else all we're going to get is McMansions, maybe we should bring these people on a tour of our existing R1 districts to see all the single family homes in our neighborhoods that already have 3 and 4 units on their properties?

There's nothing preventing us from allowing our existing homeowners to add units to their properties. In fact we're actively encouraging that. But to up-zone our neighborhoods so that some developer can step in and subdivide the property into three and four parts for millions in profits—that's how we unravel and destroy our existing community.

And finally, when they disingenuously point to homelessness as the reason to up-zone, we need to point to the criminally high vacancy rates that exist both here in Culver City and throughout Los Angeles County, which keep existing rents high for all of us, while letting over a thousand people die homeless on the streets every year.

Instead, we should be following the recommendations found in The Vacancy Report, written by SAJE, ACCE and UCLA Law. Among other things, the report suggests implementing a vacancy tax on units left empty (like the 830 vacant housing units in Culver City which was reported in official city documents). The report also suggests "using eminent domain to take the property of the worst offenders, who leave units vacant for unconscionable lengths of time" and "transferring properties to community ownership models."

With all this said, this just scratches the surface of the conversation that our community needs and deserves. If we don't do this together, in a public forum, we can be sure that the decision will be made for us, behind closed doors, by those who will profit from our loss.

Let's Trump-proof the Presidency

by Cynthia Hart

First in an occasional series on the de-Trumpification of America

After Watergate and Nixon's abuse of power, a number of important reforms were put in place to guard our Democracy from another authoritarian president like Nixon who would put himself above the law. Those reforms were good and seemed to work. Until they stopped working. Now it must be the important work of lovers of democracy at all levels to rebuild the guardrails and de-Trumpify the Presidency. It's got to be our Democratic Party doing the building. (Now that the "Grand Old Party" has degenerated into a nest of Neo-Confederates, who else?) But where to begin?

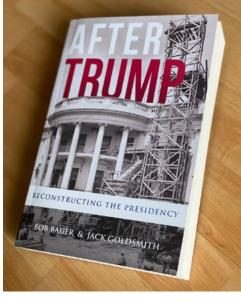

Mountains of paper and rivers of ink have already been written about this new 2021 version of the quest to form "A More Perfect Union," but for now, let me draw your attention to one book. After Trump: Reconstructing the Presidency by Bob Bauer and Jack Goldsmith.

Jack Goldsmith is a former assistant attorney general under President George W. Bush. Bob Bauer is a former Counsel to President Obama. This unlikely pair got together and wrote a completely remarkable book. I first heard of this duo in an LA Times column by Doyle McManus entitled "Trump toppled norms. Don't let it happen again."

What can Congress and our new President do?

Bauer and Goldsmith recommend several specific areas of reform. Some can be done by executive order and others require an act of Congress.

- Foreign State Influence: Candidates or campaigns should be required to report contacts with foreign governments and their agents.
- Financial Conflicts of Interest: The President should be barred from any role in the oversight of any business. (Note: Refusing the Presidential salary is not a sign of virtue!) For the sake of transparency, blind trusts should be banned. Congress should establish procedures to enforce the emoluments clause.
- Tax Disclosure: Presidents and Candidates should disclose their tax returns annually (most already do).

- The Press: Congress should strengthen the Presidential Records Act of 1978 to include twitter tweets and other social media communications as subject to the Act. Regulations should give White House press due process protections from arbitrary revocation of press passes.
- The Pardon Power: Presidents should be barred from self-pardon or using the pardon to obstruct justice. It should be a crime for a President to offer a pardon in exchange for a bribe.
- The Justice Department: The Executive branch should enhance Justice Department regulations against political bias in law enforcement, extend norms against the attorney general interfering in investigations, and enhance independence of a special counsel so that they can report to Congress and the American people credible allegations of criminal conduct by senior executive branch officials including the president.
- War Powers and Nuclear Weapons: Congress should repeal and replace the Authorizations for Use of Military Force (AUMF's) hastily enacted in the immediate freak-out over the 9/11 attack and systematically abused ever since. Clarify that the Atomic Energy Act is not a blanket authorization for first use of nuclear weapons.
- Vacancy Reform: Congress should close the loopholes in the regulation of executive branch vacancies that Trump used to circumvent the Senate confirmation process by making unilateral temporary appointments.

Happily, some legislation along these lines is already in the works. On September 23, 2020, House Democrats introduced HR8363: The Protecting our Democracy Act.

What can the grassroots do?

Our job as grassroots activists is to keep everlastingly after our elected representatives at every level of government to enact the necessary reforms. I suggest that every single time, we show up at a Town Hall or a Q&A with an elected public official we ask the question "So Mr. or Ms. Elected, what are you doing to Trump-proof the Presidency?" And give them no peace until they respond satisfactorily.

Representative Ted Lieu's Response to Trumpian Abuses

I had the opportunity recently to pose that very question to Representative Ted Lieu. He indicated that the Trump era had exposed a number of loopholes and weaknesses in Congressional Oversight. He pointed to the need for Congress to use "inherent contempt" to enforce its subpoenas. He also spoke of his work with Senator Ed Markey on HR 669/S200 The Restricting First Use of Nuclear Weapons Act.

As Thomas Jefferson may or may not have said, "The price of liberty is eternal vigilance."

I say, "Stay vigilant!"
